HORSE NOTES.

The drying winds of the past few days have been welcome to all roadmen, for the Lane and Eightl avenue, which have been for some time a regular Slough of Despond through whose depths even a Pilgrim could hardly make progress, have become again quite dry, and "speeding" has been indulged in to some extent during the past two days.

Mr. Ferguson's brown gelding Needle Gun is being jogged preparatory to being put in training. He will be entered in the spring purses. It will be remem-bered that this horse broke his leg more than a year ago, but, being a great pet with his owner, it was ago, but, being a great pet with his owner, it was decided to try the experiment of setting the leg, which was done. Mr. Ferguson brought all his great experience as a horseman to the work of affecting a cure, and seems to have succeeded admirably. Needle Gun is one of the most stylish horses on the turf and has a record close to 2:30.
Mr. John C. Sares has been opening out his black and white team since the roads became passable, and they show that they have not forgotten how to trot.

rot. Mr. James W. Gillie's brown gelding Dick is trot-ting faster than ever. He shows about a 2:35 clip when called on. Bull Run, Mr. William Johnson's fast gray gelding has become as gentle as a lamb on the road.

When first purchased by Mr. Johnson he pulled hard, but kind treatment and good horsemanship have reed him. es McKee always drives fast stock. At pre-

James McKee always drives fast stock. At present he drives a bay and brown to a top wagon.

George Lewis drives a pair of browns, very closely matched, of good style and action.

Within the past week "jogging" has come into fashion with those who own track horses and wish to give them the use of their legs before the tracks are in order for fast work. "Knapsack" is on the road every morning driving the renowned stability.

Ed. Jones' horses Confidence, Billy Barr, Commodore Nutt and White Heels take their dully exercise on Harlem lane.
The son of Hambletonian, gray gelding Lottery, is being put into condition for track work. Great things are expected of him the coming season.

A SINGULAR WILL.—A will which was admitted to probate in Cincinnati last week, bequeathed one-third of the testator's estate to his widow, and the remainder to his daughter. The will says that the widow shall receive but one-third, the amount demanded by law, because she has an ample fortune of her own, and because she deprived him of the opportunity to make more money by inducing him to give up business seoner than he otherwise would. He desired that daguerreotypes of himself shall be presented to two of his friends, and that a work got up by him, containing the original play-bills of Edwin Forrest, shall be given to that gentleman, to be preserved in the library which Mr. Forrest proposes to give for the use of the dramatic profession at his death. He prevides that his executor shall pay to the trustees of Spring Grove Cemetery $3.00 to keep in repair his lot, and makes the remark. "When old folks die and their money is distributed, their graves are often neglected." He also leaves $100 to keep in repair his mother's grave, in Newcastle, Delaware; and adds in connection with his bequest, that when in Philadelphia he searched in vain for his father's remains, desiring to lay them beside those of his mother, 'but the heathens sold his bones to build big churches. This is called Christianity! Heathens would not do so." To a friend of his yooth in Philadelphia he leaves his flute and flageolet.

DEATH OF A LAKE ERIE HERO. - Captain McBride, DEATH OF A LAKE ERIE HERO.—Captain McBride, whose death took place in Milwankee last Sunday, was wheelsman on the Erie in 1841, when that steamboat was burned on Lake Erie, by which disaster—the first of any magnitude to occur on the lakes—300 immigrants, fifty cabin passengers and all the vessel's officers and crew but about twelve were burned or drowed. Only about fifty lives were saved, passengers and crew. McBride remained at the wheel till the flames enveloped the pilot house, and after cutting loose and throwing overboard many articles to float the passengers he saved his own life by the same means. During the ten years in which he commanded the steamer Detroit Captain McBride crossed Lake Michigan in her 2.752 itimes, without a single accident to passenger. crew or vessel.

IRELAND AS IT IS.

Parliamentary Advocacy of the Cause of the Pope.

Quoten Victoria's Relations to the Holy See-Prelatical Influence-Landlords and Tenants and Agrarian Outrage - Faction and Fight-The Aristocracy of the Island.

Major O'Reilly, M. P. for Longford, gave notice in Parliament at the beginning of the session that he would "call the attention of the House of Commons to the present position of the Pope," or, in other words, that he would raise a debate on what is called the Italian question. The honorable member has a right to be heard on this subject, in which, it is well known, he takes a deep interest and on which he must be regarded as an authority, for he was once an officer in the Pope's army and fought as valiantly as any one in behalf of the Holy Sec. His sword, however, was ussless to effect the object he had so much at heart, and, true to his early love, he now resolves to raise his voice in support of that cause for which he once offered his life.

LEGISLATIVE AND PUBLIC INTEREST. The debate was looked forward to with the most intense interest, not merely by the two great parties in the House of Commons, but by all classes of British subjects. The friends of the Pope were in hopes that the English government, without giving offence to Victor Emmanuel and his Cabinet, would exercise its moral influence in behalf of the Holy Father: while the advocates of non-intervention were apprehensive lest Mr. Gladstone, who is considered favorably disposed toward his Holiness, might make use of his position to uphold the tem-poral power. I do not think that, in the present state of public feeling, a debate could have been raised on this question without seriously compromising the pesition and influence of the government. The debate would doubtless have been a warm one: Ministers would have to declare boldly either for the Pope or against him, and they bould not do this without allenating from them the Catholics of England and Ireland, who are a powerful body, or without losing a large section of their Protestant supporters.

the government were most anxious to escape the opportunity of expressing their views on this question; and they left nothing undone to induce Mr.

O'Reilly to withdraw his motion, The member for Longford occupies a high place in the opinion of Cardinal Cullen and Archbishop Man-ning. It is not too much to say that these two emi-nent prelates think more highly of him than of any nent prelates think more highly of him than of any other Irish member of Parliament. He has a keen, shrewd intellect, is eloquent and logical in debate, is prudent to a degree, and, what they doubtless prize more than all, he is a devoted "son of the Church." It appears that all the lay influence brought to bear upon the member for Longford falled to induce him either to withdraw or to postpone his motion—and Major O'Reilly is not one who is at all anxious to disobey the present government—but Mr. Glaatstone, as a dernier ressort, appealed to his friend Archbishop Manning, and the result was that the member for Longford yielded to the request of his ecclesiastical superior.

The Pope's interest will not suffer, you may be sure, by the Archbishop's interference, for there is not a prelate in the Church more earnest in his support of the Holy See than br. Manning. On the contrary, if the truth were known, it would be found that Mr. Gladstone made some fine promises to the Archbishop before his Grace consented "to do the needful" for his old friend and schooliellow.

The motion consequently is postsponed sine die, and the Catholies for the time being are greatly disappointed. Rut, though put off for the present, the question will again be revived either by Major O'Reilly or some other member, and a misters, however anxious they may be to keep silent, will have to render to the House and the country a full and precise exposition of their Italian policy.

It is greatly to be regretted that outrages of a serious nature are of frequent occurrence here, not merely, let me say, in Westmeath and those other places now so notorious for crime, but in all paris of the country. As I mentioned in a former communication, the new Land act, strange to say, has occasioned many of them: for I may tell you that notices to quit fell like snowfaskes on the peasantiry as soon as this bill became the law of the land. The people were not satisfied to go, notwithstanding that the handlord, under the provisions of the bill, is obliged to be worse of under the new regulations than they were under the old. They came to the conclusion that, after all the talk that had been about them, they would still be under the landlords' control, subject at any moment to arbitrary eviction, and their feelings of disappointment, together with the unredressed greevances that weigned them down, drove them to commit acts of violence of the grossest description. The government should know that these outrages are not to be put down by coercion. In certain districts of Ireland, as is well known, the government is armed with the fullest powers over the subject, and, the result is that in these places crime is on the increase, though the utmost vigilance is exercised by the authorities. The only way by which the tullawful combinations and confederacies which the government asserts are in existence in Westmeath and other counties can be dissolved is by taking the power of arbitrary eviction from the landlord, and "rooting the people in the soil."

from the landlord, and "rooting the people in the soil."

FACTION AND FIGHTING.

But besides these agrarian crimes, so called from their connection with the tenure and occupancy of land, there are other outrages, which at present occur somewhat frequently, and which are the result of private revenge. Indeed, it would seem that the days of "faction fighting" are not yet over, as several desperate conflicts, resembling those so graphically described in the novels of Carieton and Banim, have taken place lately in a few counties of Munster and Leinster. At a "huring match," a few weeks ago in Tipperary, a row took place between the two parties, and one young man lost his lire.

At a funeral in Kilkenny a fearful fight occurred, in which several of the puglilists were severely in ured. The cause of this unseemly scuffic is not known; it was nothing more, probably, than a trial of strength between the inhabitants of two townlands.

An ARISTOGRATIC "MUSS."

of strength between the inhabitants of two townlands.

An Aristocratic "Muss."

But, indeed, the lower, or even the middle classes, can hardly be biamed for brawls of this kind when the example comes from higher—I may say from the highest—quarters. A ball was given lately in the town hall of Waterford, and about three o'clock in the morning, a short time after the ladies had retired, a fight of a most extraordinary kind ensued among the company, in which it appears that two noble lords were the chief actors. Finding that the ladies nad gone, they began to play jokes on each other; from joking they soon came to be in earnest; blows were freely exchanged, and one unfortunate servant, who stepped in to take his master's part, received in his face the contents of a saucepan, which was meant for some more distinguished personage. Not satisfied with what had taken place inside, they renewed the encounter in the streets, and it was not until the constabulary interfered that they could be separated or persuaded to go nome. This was the amusement which engaged the attention of two scions of a "most noble house" and their friends some morning during the past week.

The Murquis of Hartington's Policy-More Coercion.

DUBLIN, Feb. 27, 1871.
The Marquis of Hartington is not likely, I fear, to be a very popular Irish Chief Secretary. It was not, of course, expected that he would be a great favorite, but even such of us as cared least for him did not expect that he would inaugurate his Irish policy by one of the most unconstitutional and outrageous propositions made in the House of Commons for more than half a century. What does he propose He proposes nothing less than the appointment more than half a century. What does he propose?

He proposes nothing less than the appointment of a select and secret committee to inquire into the condition of certain portions of Meath, Westmeath and the Kings counties. Owing to the feeling which this proposition has called into existence, not merely here, but in England and Scotland, I am inclined to think that his Lordship will have some difficulty in obtaining a majority of the House of Commons to agree to his motion. So conscious are they of their own power that the present government think they are able to carry any measure they may propose. They have been, at all events, peculiarly fortunate in obtaining assistance whenever they felt inclined to curtail the liberty of the subject in Ireland. And the present government has not been less averse to Irish coercion than any of its prodecessors. But the misfortune is that, instead of considering exceptional legislation of this kind a misfortune, they regard it as a blessing, and take credit to themselves for having resorted to it.

Mr. Chichester Fortescue, the late Irish Secretary, boasted a might or two ago, for example, that he carried the Peace Preservation act of hast session, a measure which, he was not ashamed to declare, was stronger and more potent than any which had been proposed to the House of Commons within the memory of man. But, strong and potent enough, and they ask for power to take evidence in secret, in order that, no doubt, they may make it stronger and more potent still.

MISCELLANEOUS FOREIGN ITEMS.

The French colony of Cochin China has proclaimed its adhesion to the French republic. Marshal Vaillant, who has been expelled from France by the Gambetta government, is now in used as a hospital, has been repaired and decorated, and is now open for the reception of guests.

Arai bishop Pifiole, of Guatemala, has returned from Rome to his dioceses, and was saluted by the President of the republic, with whom he made his solemn entry into the capital.

The new French Ministers are aged—Thiers, seventy-four; Dafaure, seventy-three; Larcy, sixtyave; Favre, sixty-two: Le Flo, sixty-one; Simon, fifty-seven; Lambrecht, fifty-two; Picard, fifty. Five are lawyers-MM. Thiers, Dufaure, Larcy, Pavre and Picard.

The Nacion of Buenes Ayres of the 15th of January announces the arrival there of Senor D. Manuel Renaud de Paz Soldan, on his way to Rio Janeiro for the purpose of arranging the question of limits between Peru and Brazil. Mr. Soldan is said to be a distinguished Peruvian astronomer and geo-

The singular turn of fortune is illustrated by the fact that M. Thiers, who, in negotiating for peace, sought to prevent the entry of the Prussians into Paris, is the same man who described thus the entry of the French troops into Berlin October 28, try of the French troops into Berlin October 28, 1806:—

Napoleon desired that Marshal Davoust, as a reward for the day of Auerstedt, should first enter into Berliu and receive the keys of the capital from the hands of its chief magistrate (October 25). Before entering into Berlin Napoleon stopped at Potsdam, where he ordered the sword, the girdle and the cordon of the Black Eagle of Frederick the Great to be handed to him. In taking them he excialmed, "Here is a beautiful present for the Invalides, and chiefly for those who have belonged to the army of Hanover. They will, no doubt, be happy to see in onr power the sword of the man who vanquuished them at Rossbach? Napoleon, in taking in such a respectful manner these precious relies, did assuredly not offend King Frederich, or the Prussian nation. In October 28, 1806, Napoleon made an entry into Berlin as victor, like Alexander and Cæsar. The whole population came out in order to see this grand spectacle. Napoleon entered surrounded by his guard and followed by the beautiful Cuirassiers of Hautpoul and Nausenty. The imperial Guard, in their rich uniforms, looked iner than ever. In advance were the grenadiers and horse chasseurs. In the middle were the Marshals Berthier, Duroc, Davoust, Augereau, and in the centre of this groupe, isolated by the respect due him, was Napoleon, in the simple costume which he wore at the Tuleries and on the fields of battle. Napoleon was gazed upon by an immense crowd, whose silence was expressive of sadness and admiration. Such was the spectacle seen on the long and wide street which leads from the gate of Charlottenburg to the palace of the Kings of Prussia.
